

Call for papers for the 10th open meeting of the IIAS Study Group on 'Coproductio*n* of Public Services'

Nijmegen, The Netherlands, 11-12 May 2023

The IIAS Study Group on 'Coproductio*n* of Public Services' is organizing its 10th open meeting. We welcome both past participants and newcomers with an interest in the topic. Our aim is to create and nurture a global intellectual platform for the theoretical discussion and empirical analysis of coproductio*n* and co-creation, and their implication for the organization and management of public services.

Topic

The involvement of citizens in the creation and production of public services has been a major topic in current public administration and management research. Co-creation and co-productio*n* refer to citizens being involved as co-designers and/or co-implementers of public services, alongside 'regular' service providers (i.e., government professionals).

For the open meeting, we invite contributions to different aspects of this topic, including:

1. Challenges of coproductio*n* for professionals. How can professionals (from governmental organizations as well as non-profit organizations) find ways to meaningfully interact with people using and coproductio*n* services? What are the (dis)incentives for professionals in promoting and using coproductio*n*?
2. The capacity, and willingness of citizens to engage in coproductio*n*. What motivates citizens to engage in coproductio*n*? How can different groups, including vulnerable people, be involved in coproductio*n*?
3. The potential benefits and pitfalls of directly involving citizens in the production of public services. What are the anticipated and unanticipated effects of co-productio*n*?
4. The conditions for sustaining and scaling up co-creation and co-productio*n* initiatives. What factors can contribute to making co-creation and co-productio*n* processes as well as co-creation and co-productio*n* outcomes/effects more sustainable (over time)?
5. Digital co-productio*n*: what are the experiences of co-productio*n* through digital platforms? What lessons can be learned? Please note: We are currently developing an edited volume on the topic of digital co-productio*n*. Papers submitted to the seminar may be considered for inclusion.

Date and Location

The open meeting of the Study Group on Coproductio*n* of Public Services will take place in Nijmegen, The Netherlands, 11-12 May 2023.

Cost

The registration fee is 125 Euro. Participants are responsible for their own travel and accommodation.

Submissions

Please submit abstracts (maximum 500 words) by 16 December 2022 through IAS@ru.nl. Participants will be notified of acceptance in January.

Organisation

The IAS study group on ‘Coproduction of Public Services’ is co-chaired by Trui Steen (Leiden University, the Netherlands and KU Leuven, Belgium), Tina Nabatchi (Syracuse University, US) and Dirk Brand (University of Stellenbosch, South Africa). The 2023 meeting of the study group will be organised by Taco Brandsen, Noortje Hoevens, Marlies Honingh, Menno Hoppen and Ina Radtke (Radboud University Nijmegen, the Netherlands).